

How to Ask for a Coffee Chat

(without sounding like a robot)

THE REAL TRUTH

Most people don't know 'How to ask' without sounding too transactional

How to

-  How to ask for a coffee chat
-  How to network
-  How to write a coffee chat text
-  How to make people say yes

Start with “WHY” them

(choose wisely who you want to send a message to)

Shared ground:

Same college, same course, same city, same first job energy

Dream path:

They work at a company / role you genuinely want to learn about.

Same field:

They're doing the kind of work you want to grow into

One step ahead:

They're at a stage you're aiming for next not 10 levels above

How to write the “Message”

Personal Opener

Mention something specific about them

(role, post they shared, career move, project)

Clear Intention

Learning › asking for favors

(no jobs, no referrals, no pressure)

Soft Ask

Give them an easy out

(intentions, expectations, goals)

YOU
Student

Hi ___! I came across your profile while researching ___ and loved how you transitioned into ___. I'm early in my career and would love to learn how you approached that shift. If you're open to a quick coffee chat sometime, I'd really appreciate it—totally understand if not!”

YES Lets do it

Before you hit “SEND”

Says what you're learning / building, not just your job title

Clear, friendly, not cropped from a wedding

At least one post,
comment, or share
= you're real

3-4 lines that sound like you, not a resume
